

I am writing in reference to the Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. I do not wish that the federal government should do anything to override this law. My family is now able to eat dinner without the intrusive and unwanted telephone call from a telemarketer. I rarely receive an unwanted phone call because of this law. If I want to do telephone business with a company, I will call them. I am thankful that Indiana passed a law that protects my family from unwanted telephone calls when we have valued time together in our home. Please do not do anything that would result in receiving those unwanted telemarketing calls. In fact, it would seem to me that more states should be encouraged to follow Indiana's example.
